One-sixth of Nation's Wealth Invested in This Class of Securities.

NEW YORK, July 8.-Of all the wealth in the United States, estimated at $187,729,071,090, more than one-sixth is invested in public utility companies. those enterprises engaged in supplying the people of this country with light, heat, power, water, gas, communication by telephone and telegraph, and with transportation by rail and water, in cities, between cities, and across the Authority for this assertion is to be found in a recent special bulletin of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, and in the statistics compiled by experts in the employ of one of the largest of all the public utility corporations having offices in this city.

The wealth invested in public utilitics, exceeding $30,000,000,000, earned in the last year approximately $6,000,000.000. No other field of investment was so little affected by the European war, and no other field at the present time offers fairer prospects of steady and increasing returns.

Its Part in Finances.

No other group of interests has played such a conspicuous part in the financial history of this country in the past twenty-five years. Since 1902 alone their gross earnings have increased Those of the gas and enormously. electric light corporations have increased more than 100 per cent, those of the steam railroads have increased nearly 65 per cent, while those of the electric railways have increased nearly 70 per cent.
The capital invested in the transportation and intercommunication cor-porations in the past twenty-five years has increased more than $15,000,000,000 or on the average of $600,000,000 a year. In the same period their employes have in-creased 175 per cent, and their com-pensations more than 200 per cent. At the present time more money is in-vested in public utilities than in any other single class of financial enter-

Approximately $1,100,000,000 is invested in telephone properties and their gross revenues in 1914 were about $275,000,000. In the telegraph companies, including wireless and cable communication, about $225,000,000 was invested and the gross revenues were $65,000,000.

Power Company Earnings.

The wealth tied up in electric light and power companies is estimated at $2,176,000,000, and the gross revenues of the companies in 1914 were about $500,000,000. In the street and electric railways about $4,900,000,000 is tied up, and the gross revenues are placed at $650,000,000.

The money tied up in gas plants throughout the country is placed by the expert referred to above at $916,000,000, and he estimates the gross revenues from them at $170,000,000. The valuation expert referred to above at $150,000,000. The valuation of the estimates the gross revenues from them at $170,000,000. The valuation of the water plants in the many cities of this country is placed at $1,600,000,000, but there is no sure way of forming any accurate guess as to their revenues.

Money invested in steam railroads is estimated at $16,600,000,000, and the gross revenues are placed at $3,500,000,000. The money actually tied up in express companies in tangible assets is relatively small, being about $28,000,000 but the gross earnings in 1914 were estimated at $150,000,000.

Under the classifications adopted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Nearly one-fifth of the total and its gross revenues were placed for 1914 at $35,000,000.

Some Minor Utilities. These are the principal public utility enterprises in this country, but there are many smaller enterprises which come under the same group. There are, for example, natural gas plants, whose total investment is placed at something like $350,000,000, and whose gross reverbles." are many smaller enterprises which come under the same group. There are, for example, natural gas plants, whose total investment is placed at something like $350,000,000, and whose gross revenues cannot be estimated. Under a decision of the United States Supreme Court pipe lines are classed as common carriers by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and are therefore public utilities corporations. The valuation of these lines is placed at $100,000,000, but no figures are obtainable on their gross revenues.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ross Todd, of Louisville, Ky., have arrived with their family, for the summer at the Homestead, Hot Springs, Va. Mr. Ross is a brother of Mme. Christian Hauge.

Miss Ruth Parker, Myron Parker, and Robert Dove were included in a party which motored to Cape May, N. J., to remain over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans Browne are making a stay of some length in New York city.

Col. and Mrs. C. A. F. Flagler left remains of the surface of the land.

Trigation companies, which play an important part in the financial and industrial development of the arid Western States, have a physical valuation of approximately $400,000,000.

Then there are also included under the head of public utilities such enterprises as cemetery companies, storage and warehouse companies, whose wealth is relatively unimportant when compared with the growth of the surface of the land.

The gross earnings of 275 public service corporations, not including service corporations, not including steam railroad companies, whose individual earnings were more than $100.000 each, amounted in 1914 to $896,161.591, according to statistics compiled by the Financial World.

Profit to Investors

Investors have fared exceedingly well Mrs. Frederick Holtzman is passing the summer months at Deer Park, Md., where she joined her mother, Mrs. Bonney, of Louisville, Ky.

The summer months at Deer Park, Md., which was an increase of $8,963,974, or 6.88 per cent extent of $139,194,564, which was an increase of $8,963,974, or 6.88 per cent more than the dividends of 1913. Measured by their par value, the securities issued by these 275 companies which are now in the hands of the public according to the Financial World have now passed the five billion dollar mark. Even in the six months ended January 31, 1915, a period which saw probably the worst demoralization in the history of corporation earnings, a period when railroad and industrial companies were witnessing daily a deperiod when railroad and industrial companies were witnessing daily a decline in business, the gross operating revenues of the commercial central generating stations have been estimated at $182,000,000, a figure which compares favorably with the gross earnings for the same period in 1913, amounting to $178,250,000.

Another example of the way in which while utility corporations example from public utility corporations escaped from the unfavorable influences which were at work in the financial world last year at work in the financial world last year is shown by a comparison of the gross earnings of the United States Steel Corporation, the largest and most representative industrial corporation, with those of the Pennsylvania railroad. The Steel earnings decreased 30 per cent, whereas those of the Pennsylvania decreased only 10 per cent. The gross earnings of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, one of the largest public utilities of the country, showed public utilities of the country, showed an increase of 4 per cent, over those of 1918. It is a fact that many other ublic utility companies earned more to 1914 than in any previous year of their

Problems of Adjustment.

The phenomenal growth of the public utility companies has rendered more pressing the problem of bringing about a satisfactory adjustment of relations between the corporations and the communitles which they serve. This fact was strongly brought out by Theodoro N. Vail, in a letter to the directors and phone and Telegraph Company, accom-

Defense of the Nude in Art Pictures By Margaret Edwards

Just how far the motion pictures can go in the presentation of art subjects-nude figures and the like-will probably always be a matter of much discussion. It has already been considerably discussed because of the appearance of Margaret Edwards as Truth in "Hypocrites." ost of the people who have seen "Hypocrites" agree as to the beauty of the subject and the delicate way in which the nude figure of Truth was introduced. Few critics of the film have objected to it. Censors who at first declined to let it be shown have generally reconsidered their decision and removed the ban. But the appearance of the picture has created a discussion that is likely to rage for some time. The facts being what they are, it is interesting being what they are, it is interesting to know what Miss Edwards thinks about it herself. A very young girl, brought up by artistic parents, and who has been a much sought model for sculptors and artists, she is not at all like the average model. But seventeen vears old, innocent, unaffected, and without a trace of "boldness" or self-assurance, she presents some very powerful arguments in favor of the nude in art.

"The appearance of a naked woman in a role symbolic of the truth is not immodest or immoral—it is art," said Miss Edwards, "Artists have always portrayed Truth as in my characterization. False modesty causes the criticism of the picture, for it is as much art as the statues and paintings of nude women that are being displayed in art galleries all over the world. If I had attempted to portray Truth draped, it would not have been art, but vulgarity.

"I have been taught." she continued "that my body is a symbol of purity and I am a child of nature. I love the open and outdoor sports. A healthy body is the foundation for a clean mind. A corset is an unknown quantity as far as I am concerned, and I just loathe clothes.
